Figure 4: Map of the region around Kom Firin. The location and extent of archaeological sites is taken from Survey of Egypt/EGSA maps; the positions of the modern road, the Rosetta branch of the Nile, canals and modern towns (labelled in upper case) is from satellite imagery. The course of the other two branches (the Canopic and 'Western' Nile branches) is indicative only, being based on satellite imagery, survey maps cited and previous studies (see Wilson 2008b). These channels will have meandered over time, and further bifurcations are likely to have occurred at different periods. This does not include implications from augering at Kom Firin in 2007.
